Three-dimensional chess (or 3D chess) is any chess variant that uses multiple boards representing different levels, allowing the chess pieces to move in three physical dimensions. In practical play, this is usually achieved by boards representing different layers being laid out next to each other. Three-dimensional variants have existed since at least the late 19th century, one of the oldest ...

Parham's Matrix System entails a system of play and notation that views the 8X8 matrix as a Cartesian plane on which chess pieces form vectors leading to attack routes toward the enemy King. The "Parham Attack" is characterized by the early Queen sally 2.Qh5 (or even ...Qh4 with black) and is designed to create swift threats at the enemy's weakest point or what he calls "coincidences."

This array is then multiplied by 3 transformations matrices rotating it by 30 degrees in the x, y and z axes producing an 8 x 3 array of the transformed cube about (0, 0, 0). When creating a transformation matrix between two frames, all of the points in the robotic frame need to be different in all three axes.
