CT scans are created using a series of x-rays, which are a form of radiation on the electromagnetic spectrum. The scanner emits x-rays towards the patient from a variety of angles - and the detectors in the scanner measure the difference between the x-rays that are absorbed by the body, and x-rays that are

The advantage of using a scanner to see certain sensor values and door positions also has one extra quality to the diagnostic process: Codes. Codes for the HVAC system are valuable information for you as the tech. However, a code is not the answer, a code is a starting point or a direction for repair. So many times I see vehicles come in with
